COUNTY PRISONERS MAY BE PERMITTED TO SEE SHERIFF

Request Has Been Made By Many Inmates At The County Jail

COURT HOUSE DRAPED

State Police Go To Rieker's Bedside To Get A Statement

Condition of Ernest E. Rieker, of South Langhorne, who tried to end his life after killing his wife and Sheriff Abram Kulp, remains critical, doctors at the Anna May Hospital in Spring Lake, N. J., reported today.

Rieker escaped from South Langhorne on Wednesday after he shot and killed his wife and mortally wounded the sheriff during an argument following Mrs. Rieker's attempt to replevin her effects.

Rieker pleaded with doctors to let him die.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon for the murdered wife at South Langhorne.

Monday funeral services for the late Sheriff Kulp will take place.

The entrance to the Bucks County Court House, Doylestown, was draped in black today in memory of Sheriff Kulp whom all admired and highly respected. He came from one of the oldest families in Bucks County and was known as a man of good character and one who never provoked an argument.

Sheriff Kulp was well thought of among the prisoners at the County Jail. He spent many an hour with his charges and ofttimes would engage in games with them. They highly respected him and it was his constant endeavor to start them on the right path in life.

There was considerable discussion today as to the advisability of permitting some of the prisoners to view the Sheriff's body tomorrow night, between seven and nine o'clock. Many of them have importuned the authorities for the privilege of paying their last respects to an official whom they had learned to admire and even love.

State Police from Doylestown left today for Asbury Park, accompanied by a stenographer. They will visit Rieker in the Anna May Hospital, Spring Lake, and make an effort to get a statement from him.

Local Boxers Show Up Well At Lakewood, N. J.

Last night in Lakewood, N. J., "Billy" Moffo, of Bristol, stopped "Jimmy" Larkins, of Philadelphia, after one minute of fighting in the first round.

"Sammy" Moffo, of Bristol, and Frankie Hayes, of South Philadelphia, staged one of the greatest bouts seen in Lakewood this season. After eight rounds of socking and rocking, "Sammy" was declared the winner.

Johnny Reardon, of Bristol, staged a great comeback when he knocked out "Spud" Kelley, of Newark, substitute for "Battling" Skey. Reardon had not been in the ring since about three months ago, when he was knocked out in Camden. He knocked his man out in the second round.

"Johnny" Straffe, of Bristol added another victory to his string last night when he defeated Dick Welsh, of Philadelphia, substitute for "Knockout" Francis. Straffe almost had Welsh out in the fourth round, but the bell saved him. In the sixth, the final round, Straffe had Welsh groggy, but the bell came to the rescue again. In five fights, Straffe has knocked out 3 opponents and defeated the other two. He hasn't been defeated yet.

Fractures Leg In Fall Off School House Roof

McIlvaine fell a distance of 25 feet, and was rushed to the Harriman Hospital immediately, where he is now receiving treatment. Mr. McIlvaine had been assisting the plasterers with their work on the construction of the new structure when the accident occurred.

GIVES RECITAL

Miss Agnes Clune Quinlan

who entertained members of The Bristol Travel Club yesterday afternoon

LECTURE-RECITAL GIVEN BEFORE TRAVEL CLUB

Delightful Program Rendered By Nationally Known Artist Yesterday

A PLEASING PROGRAM

Members of Bristol Travel Club were delightfully entertained yesterday afternoon by a lecture-recital given by Miss Agnes Clune Quinlan.

Miss Quinlan is a nationally known accompanist and piano virtuoso. Her charming manner coupled with her rare ability to bring her audience to a responsive mood, was most fascinating, and her auditors were captivated by the interesting lecture on the musical instruments of Ireland and its ancient music.

In a manner peculiar to herself, Miss Quinlan led her hearers to the scenes of the old halls of the Barons, the folk-life of the country side, and the rollicking gayety of Irish life. Particularly pleasing were her renditions of these old airs familiar in melody, but made living by her interpretation, and the story of their origin as she introduced the varied moods of Irish life.

The Travel Club met yesterday at the residence of Mrs. Clifford L. Anderson. There was a short business session previous to the recital by Miss Quinlan.

A short talk on the instruments and characteristics of traditional music of Ireland, giving examples of occupational songs and representative airs of the three modes of ancient Irish music, was given before Miss Quinlan rendered the following program:

"The Wild Hills of Clare," (16th Century air) arranged by Cyril Scott (English); transcription of Moore's melodies; "Tho' the Last Glimpse of Erin," arranged by Esposito (Dublin); "The Irish Washerwoman" (country dance tune), Sowerby (American); "The Little Brown Thorn Thrush", (traditional Londonderry air); "Leprechaun's Dance," Grainger (Australian); "Ned of the Hills," O'Sullivan (American); "Molly on the Shore," (two Cork tunes) Grainger; "The Top o' the Mornin'," J. P. Scott (American); "Donnybrook Fair," J. P. Scott (American).

Firemen Called Twice; One A False Alarm

A false fire alarm was sounded from box at Dorrance and Canal streets last night, at 11 o'clock. Firemen responded but found no fire.

At 2 o'clock this morning an alarm was struck from box 47, Beaver and Garden streets. A pile of wood in the dwelling at 817 Mansion street, occupied by Sarah Hoffman, was found to be ablaze. Slight damage was done.

Amisson Pottery Defeats Pacific Boiler Bowlers

Amisson Pottery defeated Pacific Steel Boiler two games of their three game match last night, finishing up the schedule for the first half with Rohm & Haas, first; No. 2 Fire Co., second, and Pacific by losing the last two games, in third place.

The second half begins Tuesday, with Rohm & Haas playing Harriman, and there will be many a different tale to tell after the second half is over than there was in the first half.

JOHN R. STACKHOUSE FOUND DEAD IN BED AT HOME HERE

John R. Stackhouse, 66, who for several years had resided with Mrs. Maurice Watson, Buckley street, was found dead in bed this morning by John R. Watson, Bath street druggist.

Mr. Stackhouse, according to Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young, retired as usual last night. He failed to respond to calls this morning of Mrs. Watson who had several times summoned him to breakfast. Mrs. Watson summoned her son, John R., druggist, of Bath street, and he went to his mother's residence and to the room occupied by Stackhouse, where he found the man dead in bed. He had been dead for several hours, it is said. Deputy Coroner Young gave heart failure as the cause of death.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Tales of shanghaing of a crew and rum running on the high seas were unfolded early today to U. S. Commissioner Howard M. Long by a ship radio operator in the first midnight hearing here since the World War. The hearing ended early today with Captain J. H. S. MacDonald, of the British steamship Clackamas, being held in $5,000 bail on charges of liquor smuggling. The mate and engineer of the vessel were held in $3,000 bail each and 30 members of the crew in $1,000 bonds each. The vessel is anchord in the Delaware River off Greenwich Point under government guard.

JUDGE RYAN ADVOCATES CO. WELFARE WORKER

Act of '25 Provides Directors Of Poor to Employ Such A Worker

TO GUARD CHILDREN

(Special to The Courier)

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 26.—The grand jury in submitting the February report in criminal court of Bucks county yesterday recommended that steps be taken by the proper authorities to secure a welfare worker for Bucks County.

Judge William C. Ryan in addressing the Grand Jury called attention to an Act of 1925 which provides that Directors of the Poor may employ a welfare worker. He called attention to the increasing number of young children who are being brought to the county home to be placed in private homes, and the need for social service work to make it certain that the homes into which they go will provide the type of care and environment which they should have.

To Organize Scout Council At Meeting Next Monday

It will gladden the hearts of the Bristol Boy Scouts and their scoutmasters to learn that their long sought after county council will receive its most forward step at the county meeting of men throughout the county Monday evening at 8.15 p. m., at the Court Room, Court House, Doylestown. Judge William C. Ryan will preside and Roy Seymour, regional executive for the states of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia will speak.

The long hoped for central council camp will be a reality. Court of honor, review boards, field meets, treasure hunts, trump hikes, merit badge excursions, and many other thrilling activities will then be possible.

Bristol will be represented by a group of her citizens lead by James Brooks. Everyone is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Ernest Gamble Arrested Trying To Take Picture

Mr. Ernest Gamble, the distinguished basso, of the Gamble Concert Party, which appears at the Bristol high school March 8th, in his student days in Europe was an enthusiastic devotee of the kodak and he secured many interesting pictures of European scenes, army reviews, royalty, etc.

This was before the days when kodaks were so universal and Mr. Gamble was in a large Continental city, where a big demonstration was going on in which the Czar of Russia, the Kaiser of Germany, several high officials and 30,000 soldiers were taking part. Mr. Gamble was anxious to secure a picture of the Czar and was manouvering about in order to get a good view. Suddenly a soldier rushed up to Mr. Gamble with bayonet fixed and placed him under arrest. He was at once surrounded; the procession stopped and for a time there was a great commotion. The soldiers thought he was an anarchist and that the peculiar looking box he had under his arms was a dynamite bomb.

Mr. Gamble thought his time had come and that he was about to be cast into prison. He had great difficulty in explaining in pantomime for the most part that he was not a bomb thrower and that the innocent looking box was only a kodak. It appears the Russians had never seen a kodak before and mistook it for a bomb. He was finally allowed to go, but he was not permitted to take a picture of the Emperor Nicholas.

BRISTOL HIGH SCORES 5TH STRAIGHT VICTORY

Local Quintet Defeats Berwyn By the Score of 33 to 11

GAME WELL PLAYED

Yesterday afternoon Bristol High won their fifth straight basketball game, defeating Berwyn High by the score 33 to 11.

It was a very interesting game, Bristol playing one of the best defensive games of the season.

Bristol took the lead at the start on a goal by Opdyke. They increased it by excellent passing and shooting until they held a nine to nothing advantage. Berwyn could never pierce the Bristol defense to any extent, while Bristol, with excellent passing would get the ball near Berwyn's basket where Hardy, Opdyke and Wright would make the net.

At half time Bristol had a lead of 21 to 4.

At the start of the second half Bristol scored on a field goal by Wright. Berwyn played better in this half and held Bristol to 12 points. Bristol would probably have made a higher score had not Wright been put out on personal fouls.

Hardy was high scorer for Bristol with 11 points while "Whitey" Opdyke had ten.

Hunt played the best game for Berwyn and scored three points:

Mrs. George Miller Attends Week-End House Party

Mrs. George Miller, of Cedar street, went to New Brunswick, N. J., on Friday, where she met her brother, Mr. Gregg Hibbs, and was chaperone at the Beta Theta Pi House party over the week-end.

Friday afternoon a swimming meet was held, which was won entirely by the students at Rutgers College. In the evening the junior "prom" was held in the gymnasium, it being a very brilliant affair. Saturday afternoon a very interesting basketball game was played between Rutgers and Swarthmore, Rutgers winning with a score of 30-27.

Saturday evening a house party dance was given in the Beta Theta Pi House, which was enjoyed by all those present. Mrs. Miller returned to Bristol on Sunday.

VIOLATES PAROLE; ORDERED TO JAIL; MUST PAY COSTS

John Carr, of Bristol, Failed To Obey Orders of The Court

SENTENCED DECEMBER

Other Court Cases Disposed Of by Judge William C. Ryan

Disposition of Cases

Robert J. Patterson, of Hatboro: Charge, larceny, felonious entry; pleaded guilty; sentence suspended and defendant placed on probation for one year.

John Carr, of Bristol: Charge, breaking of probation order; sentenced to serve one year in the Bucks County Prison.

Dragon Bender and Paul Zellocovitch, of Morrisville: Charge, assault and battery with intent to kill, aggravated assault and battery, assault and battery; verdict, not guilty of first count but guilty of second and third count; sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs and serve four months in the Bucks County Prison.

Walter B. Shive, of Philadelphia: Charge, operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor; pleaded guilty; sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and costs.

Charles Besch, of Quakertown: Charge, assault and battery; verdict, not guilty but pay the costs.

(Special to The Courier)

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 26.—John Carr, of Bristol, notorious in that borough for his liquor law violations, and a frequent defendant in the criminal court of Bucks county for a number of years, was sentenced last December by Judge Ryan to serve one year in the Bucks County Prison and sentence was suspended on condition that Carr would leave Bucks county at once.

Carr did not leave the county and has been violating the law in Bristol recently. Yesterday he was brought back by Police Chief McGuckin to Court and was directed by Judge Ryan to serve his one-year sentence, pay $100 fine and costs of the case.

A 22-year-old Hatboro youth who was for a number of years one of the wards at the Christ Home, Warminster township, yesterday told Judge William C. Ryan in criminal court that he stole some clothes from the Home on February 18, because he had scarcely enough clothes to cover his body.

Robert J. Patterson is the youth who was arrested on February 20 by State Trooper Bankert, of the Doylestown sub-station of State police. Yesterday he pleaded guilty to the theft of some clothes and a bicycle. He stole the clothes from the warehouse of the Home at night and rode the bicycle back to Hatboro. Patterson said that he intended to take the bicycle back to the Home some night.

Trooper Bankert testified that he made an investigation of the case and found that the youth's employer in a Hatboro hosiery mill had promised him his position again if he did not receive a prison sentence. The superintendent of the Home also told Trooper Bankert that he did not care to have the youth prosecuted.

Patterson told the Court that he was learning a trade in the hosiery mill and was receiving $10 a week and paying $10 a week board in Hatboro. He admitted that he knew it was wrong to steal the clothes but explained that he had to do something in order to get clothes.

Judge Ryan suspended sentence and placed Patterson on parole for a period of one year with Deputy Sheriff Harvey D. Hunsberger named as the probation officer.

Walter B. Shive, of Philadelphia, pleaded guilty to operating his automobile along the Easton Highway near Warrington while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and costs.

Shive is a tire salesman for a well known manufacturing concern. His employer, as a character witness, testified that Shive was a very highly respected and trusted employe. Shive told the Court that he had taken two drinks of wine at the home of a friend in Easton at noon the day of his arrest and that when he was apprehended by Corporal S. J. Kennedy, of the State Highway Patrol, he admitted that he had taken the two drinks. The officer said there was no accident.

THE BRAIN IS SUPREME

Remember how on Fourth of July night you used to take a little fireworks stick called a sparkler, and whirl it about? You wove circles, figure eights, all sorts of fantastic patterns in the air. And at that time you didn't realize that the figures you were seeking didn't exist at all. It was your eyes that were deceiving you.

Try the same experiment any time with a match or a glowing cigar. You can't trust your eyes. That's why so many of us need glasses.

You can't trust your nose, either. The sweetish, almond smell may come from deadly cyanide of potassium. Many of the poison gases in the World war had a not unpleasant smell—at first.

Your ears are just as unreliable. Just try to whistle a tune in someone's presence. Unless you are a phenomenon, you'll whistle mostly wrong notes, off key. Your whistler's all right. It's your ear that's playing a trick on you.

Your taste, allied to smell, is equally deceptive. The sense of touch is probably the most reliable of all, but it is a poor thing at best. How would you like to sit down blindfolded among enemies, and agree to eat whatever you might be permitted to feel of?

Then, if the five senses are such poor servants, how is it we get along so well with their aid? It is because the brain directing them is more perfect than any one sense. When the eyes fail, the brain orders the touch-sense and the hearing-sense to help out.

No life, no home, no business, can be successfully carried on without a central mind more capable than any of the subordinates. Just as your senses, co-operating, achieve what no single one could do, so in your every activity you will find most success if you, too, learn to co-operate. Know when to subordinate yourself, and be not afraid when it comes your time to command.

THE STORY THUS FAR

When Lucinda Blake, a Western widow, hears of a Mrs. Monroe who is seeking her long-lost son, she thinks she finds an identifying mark of a scar on a tramp who asks for food. He steals and from shock she dies. Fred Blake, her stalwart son, coming from a rodeo on Silver, his horse, finds her so and tracks the tramp, who in the ensuing struggle dies after his own revolver goes off. A watcher has seen all. In Sierra Mrs. Monroe is paid a visit by three men.

None of the three seemed particularly affected by the sweet, clear piercing mountain air as they rode slowly along. It was evident that they were arguing.

"Ef you'd done like I told yuh to, yuh no-good loafer," cried old man Burlingame, slapping his ancient nag irritably, "I wouldn't have ta be pullin' a stunt like this. You're no son o' mine, yuh dance-hall lady!"

"Aw, shut up!" shrilled Steve Burlingame. "I told yuh once before I tried, and that Monroe girl wouldn't fall fer me. An' besides, I'm not hankerin' to be nurse-maid to a danged ranch all my life, neither!"

"Who yuh tellin' ta shut up, huh?" shouted his father, red-faced. "I got plenty on yuh, even ef yuh are my own son—blast the day I ever saw yore puppy mug!—and ef yuh had only 'a' tried to hook that sassy miss I wouldn't have ta be doin' nothin' crooked. Lucky fer yuh I got a father's feelin'!"

"Cut it out," growled Powell, shifting menacingly on his horse. "You guys gimme a pain in the neck. Aw right—Steve don't want ta marry June Monroe—now get busy, y' ole buzzard, an' slap the ole girl's monicker down on that paper. Yore jawin' gi's me an ear-ache. Pipe down!"

They rode on in peppery silence, the old man's coat-tails flapping grotesquely behind him.

They entered the gate of the Monroe ranch, and a hand ran up to take their horses. As soon as they entered the ranch-grounds their faces lost their sour looks and became bland and friendly. Now Steve Burlingame slapped his father energetically on the back for the benefit of Mrs. Monroe, who stood hospitably at the door of the house, meanwhile muttering so that she could not hear, "G'wan—I hope yuh break yore danged neck!"

They moved up to where Mrs. Monroe stood and doffed their hats.

"Good-day, good-day, Widder," cried Luke Burlingame cheerily, shaking her hand. "I do say that every time I see yore face it looks mighty near four years younger, an' that's the truth!"

"How you do talk, Mr. Burlingame!" said Mrs. Monroe, laughing. "You know that's not so. But, like every woman, I'm not at all sorry to hear it. Although I'm getting to be a pretty old woman by now. Won't you gentlemen come in?"

They trooped in after her, smiling and winking.

In the living-room, large, cosy and comfortable, they waited for her to be seated, whereupon they carefully took seats and looked pleasant. Powell looked around at the cheerful room with glittering eyes. Steve Burlingame looked gloomily out of the window.

"What can I do for you?" asked Mrs. Monroe.

"Well, now, Widder Monroe," said Luke Burlingame, clearing his throat importantly, "we've come—on business."

"Yes?" Mrs. Monroe was noncommittal.

"An' mighty important business, too. Now you're a gosh-awful little woman to be runnin' sech a big ranch, ain't yuh?" And old Luke tried to appear jocose.

"Well, I have my daughter, June, and there's Buddy, all ready to grow up," answered Mrs. Monroe, smiling.

"Yes, yes, I know," said old Luke hastily. "But we was thinkin' that there's no tellin' what kin happen to a great big ranch like yourn with no man ta sorta take care o' things fer yuh. Ain't that so?"

Mrs. Monroe sighed. "Yes," she said, "sometimes I do miss a man's hand in running my affairs. But," brightening up, "June is such a splendid advisor."

"That's so," agreed old Luke. "But how'd yuh like to secure yer future ferever? Invest in a certain rock-bound security that'll bring yuh a steady income so that ye'll never have to worry about yer affairs?"

"It sounds nice, Mr. Burlingame. I've been thinking about it since you were here last. What are these securities?"

Old Luke rubbed his hands excitedly. "Now ye're talkin', Widder!" he exclaimed. "I knew ye'd see it my way!" And with shaking hands he delved into his coat pocket and brought out several important looking engraved papers. He laid them on the table, and, tapping them with his finger, said softly:

"These stock certificates, Widder Monroe, were issued fer a comp'ny my son an' Ed—Mr. Powell—an' myself have started to swing certain oil wells. Mr. Powell has his eye on. It's a secret yet, an' we wanted to let you in on it afore we made it public. I tell yuh, Widder, when these here oil wells begins pumpin' up that black glod fer yuh ye're on Easy street, an' no mistake!"

Mrs. Monroe took up one of the certificates curiously and read it. It was engraved ornately, and a large picture of a derrick and a well decorated one corner. It read:

Oil Certificate
FORTUNE OIL CO.
Incorporated
CAPITAL STOCK $500,000.00
Par Value $1.00

"My!" said Mrs. Monroe, "that must be an awfully good well!"

Ed Powell, ruffling his black beard, cut in. "Missus Monroe," he said impressively, "that there well's goin' to be the biggest gusher this state o' Californy ever seen!"

Mrs. Monroe glanced interestedly at the certificate. "How do I know that it is?"

Old Luke looked pained. "Why, Widder, what a thing ta say! Ain't I guaranteein' it? Ain't Mr. Powell a reliable citizen? Ain't my son in it—my son," he said, leaning forward, "who hankers after that purty little daughter o' yourn? I'm surprized that yuh should think sech a thing!"

"That well's goin' to be the biggest gusher Californy ever seen!"

Mrs. Monroe said: "I'm sorry if I hurt your feelings, Mr. Burlingame. But, of course, I must be careful. What do I have to do?"

Mrs. Monroe rose to get her securities from the wall-safe in the library, and instantly old Luke was leaning over and whispering gloatingly: "See? Didn't I tell ye I'd work it? Leave it ta ole Luke!"

Powell scowled. "Yuh ain't got no call ta crow yet, Luke. Collect an' then yap!"

Luke waved him off airily. "Well, ef she don't fall fer that sales talk I'll walk ta Chicago an' take a bath in Marsh-ll Field's window!"

"Ye'll walk to the poor-house, ya feather-brain!" sneered his son. "Yore line o' talk sounded as true as a six dollar saxophone. She won't fall! Why didn't ya let me handle it?"

Old Luke began to sputter: "My son—my own son, drat him, talkin' ta me that way! I'll—"

"I'm yore son, all right, but I'll never brag about it!" snarled Steve, up on his feet and towering over his father. He snatched Luke's fountain pen from the table, where the old man had already put it for readiness, and pointed at it accusingly. "Look at that pen, leakin' all over. Yore sloppy enough to be an artist—ef ye had the brains!"

His father sputtered with rage, choking. "Don't rile me, ye smart aleck—or I'll forgit I'm yore father an'—"

Steve Burlingame was livid with rage. While Powell sat calmly looking on, chewing tobacco, he raised his arm threateningly. The old man's eyes popped with fear. Then, just as if it seemed the younger man was going to strike his father, the hand descended energetically and began to pat his father's shoulder. Steve, his face wreathed in a grin, turned to face Mrs. Monroe, who had just entered the room and was standing watching the pair.

"I was jest explainin' to dad," said Steve cheerfully, "what a dinged fool he is ta assume all that responsibility o' runnin' yore estate, but I gotta give him credit. He sure is a helpful citizen—specially when ladies are concerned!" Grinning, he again sat down, then glared balefully at his father under cover of his arm.

Mrs. Monroe blushed and handed old Luke a list of securities. He looked the list over carefully, then said softly: "Now all ye gotta do is sign yore name on the line . . . here . . . and ye don't have to worry no more."

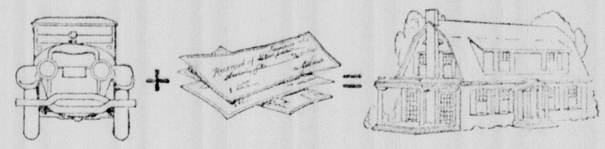
CAR + RENT = A HOME



Being a Story of What Might Have Been

¶John Jones was an ordinary good citizen. He had a happy home (rented at so much per month), a good wife and two healthy, lusting youngsters.

¶Each month John paid the landlord $80.00, a moderate rental, and the Jones family was happy.

¶Came a time when John fell for the polished patter of the automobile salesman. $200.00 down and $40.00 a month he paid for his new "Four in Line" sedan.

¶For two years the Jones family enjoyed their new plaything. Then the Browns and the Grays flashed by in their "latest motor masterpieces" and the Joneses longed for more "pep," more speed, more cylinders, and four-wheel brakes. Getting a new car was the answer.

¶But—this time Jones happened to meet up with a real estate salesman. He talked—Jones listened—learned much and received a hard jolt.

¶Translated into dollars and cents here was the jolt: His car, complete—plus freight, insurance and "extras," had cost him exactly $805.21. In the two years of steady running it had travelled over 7,000 miles at an average cost of five cents per mile—total $350.00.

¶In these same two years $1,250.00 had been spent for rent. Thus his expenditures for car and rent over the two year period amounted to $1,355.21. Allowing $200.00 for the present market value of the car (worth a net expenditure of $1,155.21—with nothing to show.

¶An average home would cost approximately $6,000.00. That same amount of money put into a home would have meant a clear title in seven years—and then no further payments for rent.

¶The Jones family have returned to the shoe leather route for transportation—and are paying on a home. Their former "surface" happiness now becomes genuine joy. The new car will come later.

BRISTOL "CASEYS" EASILY WIN FROM BORDENTOWN

Bristol "Caseys" showed championship form last night and gained an easy victory over Bordentown "Caseys" at Lutheran Hall by a 54 to 30 score.

Bristol started right after the top-off to cannonnade the basket and by the end of the first half had a lead of 30 to 18.

In the final period Bristol continued the same speed and Bordentown was never able to cut down the lead.

"Jim" Sweeney was high scorer of the evening with 21 points to his credit. Jim also set a record for local basketballers to shoot at when he caged three baskets in quick succession in less than 30 seconds. Carty and P. Rodgers played well for the Jersey "Caseys."

In the preliminary game the Bordentown Odd Fellows defeated the Celtics, 22 to 18. This contest was rough and hard fought throughout the 40 minutes of play with the Jerseymen holding a good advantage all the way.

Bristol K. of C. will play Doylestown Blue Sox at Lutheran Hall next week. Celtics will also clash with Company D, also from the county seat.

Violates Parole; Sent To Jail; Must Pay Costs

Dragon Bender and Paul Zellocovitch, of Morrisville, were found guilty yesterday of a charge of aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery. The altercation grew out of a grudge fight in which one man lost an eye and another was stabbed in the back.

Judge Ryan sentenced both of the defendants to pay fines of $100 and costs and serve four months in the Bucks County Prison.

A jury yesterday acquitted Charles Besch, of Quakertown, but directed to pay the costs in a charge of assault and battery brought by his wife. Becsh, it was alleged by the Commonwealth, fought with his wife following an argument over the loss of $8 that Besch had parted with in a poker game.

10 o'clock; Morning Service, 10.30, with Quentin K. Y. Huang, a graduate of St. John's University, Shanghai, China, as the speaker; Sunday School, 2 p. m., at which time Mr. Huang will speak again; 3 p. m., School of Religious Education; 6.45 p. m., Epworth League Devotional Meeting; 7.30, Evening Service, the pastor, Rev. Walter H. Canon, speaking on "The Power of Silence;" 9 o'clock, Prayer Group.

Mr. Huang, who will speak at the two services during the day, entered the Philadelphia Divinity School and the University of Pennsylvania upon his arrival in this country in 1925, graduating from the University on February 12th last. In 1928 he expects to return to China as a minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

At the Croydon Community M. E. Church, February 27th, the Rev. Geo. C. Shoe will preach morning and evening. The subject for the morning service at 10.30 will be "Trying the Spirits; and the subject for the evening meeting at 7.45 will be "The Embassage to Eden." Sunday School will be held at 2.30 p. m.; and Christian Endeavor at 7 p. m. Prayer Service will be on Thursday at 8 p. m.

Dr. Sterling Rex, of Philadelphia, Pa., will sing at the Bethel A. M. E. Church tomorrow at 3 p. m. The Rev. S. W. Wilmore is pastor of the Bethel Church.

The Sunday School of the Tullytown Christian Church will meet on Sunday morning at the usual time. The evening service will be held at 7.45. Rev. John Green, pastor of the church, will preach on a very interesting topic.

The services of the Manning Memorial M. E. Church will be held as follows. Sunday School, 2.30 p. m.; Evening Worship, 7.30 p. m. The Rev. Francis J. S. Morrow will take for his subject," Christian Expediency." There will be special music and singing.

AN ORDINANCE

AN ORDINANCE TO REGULATE THE PROPER AND SAFE CONSTRUCTION OF CHIMNEYS, FLUES AND FIREPLACES IN THE BOROUGH OF BRISTOL.

BE IT ORDAINED AND ENACTED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE BOROUGH OF BRISTOL, AND IT IS HEREBY ORDAINED AND ENACTED BY AUTHORITY OF THE SAME:

Scope of the Ordinance.

This Ordinance does not apply to chimneys for high pressure boilers, furnaces used in manufacture, or for other heating appliances where high temperatures are maintained; but shall apply to all other chimneys which form a part of a building construction.

Section I. Chimney Construction.

1. The walls of all chimneys to which this Ordinance applies, whether the fuel used be wood, coal, gas or oil, shall be built of brick, concrete, stone, or hollow tile, of such thickness and construction as is hereafter specified, but this shall not preclude the use of a metal smoke-stack when located inside of a vent shaft having walls not less than 8 inches thick, and having an air space between the walls and stack on all sides.

2. Brick chimneys shall be built of solid brick, or may be built of perforated radial brick manufactured for the purpose and adapted to withstand high temperatures, but no other hollow brick shall be used.

3. The walls of brick chimneys shall be not less than 3¾ inches thick (width of a standard size brick), and shall be lined with fire clay flue lining.

4. Flue lining may be omitted in brick chimneys for private dwellings provided the walls of the chimneys are not less than 8 inches thick, and that the inner course shall be a refractory clay brick having a softening point of at least 1922 degrees Fahrenheit (Seger Cone 05).

5. Perforated radial brick chimneys may be unlined, provided the brick shall have a softening point of not less than 1994 degrees Fahrenheit (Seger Cone 03), and shall be not less than 7½ inches in radial thickness, except that when such chimney is located inside a vent shaft having walls not less than 8 inches thick, the thickness of the chimney wall may be determined by engineering design. The brick shall be shaped to the circular and radial lines of the various sections of the shaft so as to form even joints.

6. All brick work shall be laid in spread mortar, with all joints push-filled. Exposed joints both inside and outside shall be struck smooth. No plaster lining permitted.

7. Concrete chimneys cast in place shall be suitably reinforced vertically and horizontally. The walls shall be not less than 3¾ inches thick and shall be lined with fire clay flue lining.

Flue linings may be omitted in reinforced concrete chimneys for private dwellings, provided the walls of the chimneys be not less than 6 inches thick, and provided further that quartz gravel shall not be used as the coarse aggregate.

8. Concrete blocks used in chimney construction shall have walls not less than 3¾ inches thick, and blocks enclosing more than one flue shall have suitable reinforcement completely encircling the blocks and well embedded in them. All concrete block chimneys shall have fire clay flue lining.

9. Stone chimneys shall be at least 4 inches thicker than required for corresponding brick chimneys, and shall have fire clay flue linings. Rubble stone chimney walls shall be not less than 12 inches thick.

10. Hollow building tile shall not be used for the walls of isolated or independent chimneys, but may be used for chimneys built in connection with exterior hollow tile walls of buildings not exceeding three stories in height, in which case the chimney walls shall be not less than 8 inches thick. The outer 8 inches of a building wall may serve as the outside wall of the chimney, but the remaining chimney walls shall be constructed of two layers of 4-inch tile set with broken joints; or they may be built of 4 inches of solid brickwork. In either case the walls of the chimney shall be securely bonded into the wall of the building. No chimney shall be corbeled from a hollow tile wall. All chimneys built of hollow building tile shall have fire clay flue lining.

11. Chimneys shall be built at least 3 feet above flat roofs, and 2 feet above the ridges of peak roofs, and shall be properly capped with stone, terra cotta, concrete, cast iron, or other approved material; but no such cap or coping shall decrease the required flue area.

12. Fire clay flue linings shall be manufactured from suitable refractory clay, either natural or compounded, which has a softening point not lower than 1994 degrees Fahrenheit (Seger Cone 03), and shall be adapted to withstand high temperatures and flue gasses. They shall be of standard commercial thickness, but not less than ¾ inch. The flue sections shall be set in mortar of quality hereafter specified and shall have the joints struck smooth on the inside. The masonry shall be built around each section of lining as it is placed, and all spaces between masonry and linings shall be completely filled with mortar. No broken flue lining shall be used. Flue linings shall start at least 4 inches below the bottom of smokepipe intakes of flues, or from the throats of fireplaces, and shall be continuous the entire heights of the flues and project at least 4 inches above chimney top to allow for a 2 inch wash and a 2 inch projection of lining. The wash or splay shall be formed of a rich cement mortar. To improve the draft the wash surface should be concave wherever practical. Instead of the wash, a special chimney cap or coping may be used. Wherever flue linings are specified fire brick may be substituted if desired.

13. Chimneys shall not rest upon or be carried by wooden floors, beams or brackets, nor be hung from wooden rafters. Iron brackets or stirrups attached to wooden construction shall not be used to support chimneys. In frame buildings chimneys shall always be built from the ground up, or rest on basement walls.

14. Chimneys shall be built upon concrete or masonry foundations properly proportioned to carry the weight imposed without danger of settlement or cracking. The foundation for an exterior chimney shall start below the frost line.

15. The walls of brick buildings may form part of a chimney, but the walls of the chimney shall be securely bonded into the walls of the building, and the flue shall be lined the same as an independent chimney. Flues in party walls shall not extend beyond the center of the walls, and their location shall be permanently indicated on the exposed side of the wall.

16. No wall less than 12 inches thick shall be used to support a corbeled chimney; such corbeling shall not project more than 6 inches from the face of the wall, and in all such cases the corbeling shall consist of at least five courses of brick.

17. Flues shall be built as nearly vertical as possible, but in no case shall they have an angle greater than 45 degrees from the vertical. Where flues change direction, the abutting linings at the angle joints shall be chipped to fit closely, and at no point shall the cross section area be reduced. There shall be but one connection to a flue.

18. Not more than two flues shall be permitted in the same flue space, and the joints of any two adjoining sets of flue linings shall be offset at least 7 inches. When there are more than two flues in a chimney, at least each third flue shall be separated from the others by a smoke-tight withe or division wall of brick or concrete at least 3¾ inches thick and bonded into the sidewalls. Each flue intended for a heating furnace or boiler connection, or for a fireplace, shall be separated from other flues by such a withe. In hollow tile chimneys the withe may be of tile.

19. When any single flue area within chimney walls exceeds 200 square inches, the walls shall be built not less than 8 inches thick and shall have fire clay flue lining as previously specified, but when flues become so large as to render it impractical to secure fire clay flue lining, they shall be lined with fire brick for a distance of at least 25 feet from the point of intake. Fire brick shall be laid in fire clay mortar.

20. Connections between chimneys and roofs shall be made with sheet metal counter or cap flashing (copper recommended), arranged to overlap roof flashing and allow for movement that may occur between chimneys and roofs. (Illustrations on file at Borough Engineer's Office.)

21. No increase in the wall thickness of chimneys, nor any projecting masonry, shall be permitted within a distance of 12 inches above or below the rafters or roof joists.

22. Irrespective of whether the fuel used be coal, coke, wood, or oil, the minimum area inside of chimney flue linings for various heating devices shall be as follows: For warm air furnaces, or low pressure steam or hot water heating boilers, not less than 75 square inches; for fireplaces, not less than one-tenth the area of the fireplace opening, but never less than 75 square inches; for stoves, ranges, and other forms of room heaters, 49 square inches for rectangular flues, or an inside diameter of 7 inches for round flues. In no case shall the short cross section dimension of a rectangular flue be less than two-thirds the greater dimension.

When gas is the fuel used in a heating furnace, boiler, or automatic hot water heater, the flues shall be of the same size and construction as required for stoves and ranges using other fuel. Vent flues where required for other domestic gas burning appliances may be of smaller size, but not less than 10 square inches. Such flues shall be made of fire clay or its equivalent not less than 1 inch thick with joints properly designed to effect a permanent seal, and the surrounding masonry walls may be omitted. Metal vent flues are not permitted.

23. Smokepipe intakes to flues shall always enter the chimney through the side and shall consist of fire clay or metal thimbles securely set in the chimney wall with mortar, or the intake may be cast in concrete. Such openings shall be at least 18 inches below wooden lath and plaster or other combustible ceilings, or open joists. Neither the intake pipe nor thimble shall project into the flue. No woodwork shall be placed within 6 inches of the thimble. The thimble shall be surrounded by metal lath and plaster for a space of at least 6 inches, or an open space of that width shall be provided on all sides. (Illustrations on file at Borough Office.)

24. All mortar used in chimney construction, except as specified for fire brick in paragraph 19, shall be cement mortar proportioned as follows: Two bags of Portland cement, not less than 188 pounds, and one bag of dry hydrated lime, 50 pounds, thoroughly mixed dry. To this mixture shall be added three times its volume of clean, sharp sand with sufficient water to produce proper consistency. When dry hydrated lime is not available, 1 cubic foot of completely slaked lime putty may be substituted for 50 pounds of dry hydrate. In case of such substitution, the mixing of lime and cement shall be very thorough. Dry hydrate should always be used in preference to lime putty.

26. All flues to which heating furnaces or boilers are to be connected shall be subjected to a smoke test before acceptance, but the test shall not be made until the mortar has thoroughly hardened. The method of test is to build a smudge fire at bottom of the flue and while the smoke is flowing freely from the flue, close it tightly at the top. Escape of smoke into other flues or through the chimney walls indicates openings that shall be made tight before the chimney is accepted. The test shall be made by the contractor in the presence of the Building Inspector or other official having jurisdiction, and of the owner or his representative.

Section II. Woodwork Around Chimneys.

1. No wooden beams, joists, or rafters shall be placed within 2 inches of the outside face of chimneys, whether the same be for smoke, air or any other purpose. No woodwork shall be placed within 4 inches of the back wall of any fireplace. See Plate III., Fig. 2, and Plate IV., Fig. 4, at Borough Engineer's Office.

2. All spaces between chimneys and wooden joists or beams shall be filled with loose cinders, loose mortar refuse, gypsum block, or other porous incombustible material to form a firestop. See Plates I., III. and IV. at Borough Engineer's Office.

The incombustible material shall be supported by strips of sheet metal or metal lath set into the brickwork and nailed to the wooden beams, forming a buckled flexible joint between, as indicated in Plate I.; or by similar strips of metal nailed to the woodwork with the inner edge close to the chimney. See Plate V. at Borough Engineer's Office.

3. No wooden studding, furring, lathing, or plugging shall be placed against any chimney, or in the joints thereof. Wooden construction shall either be set away from the chimneys, or the plastering shall be directly on the masonry or on metal lathing or on incombustible furring material. Wood furring strips placed around chimneys to support base or other trim shall be insulated from the masonry by asbestos paper, at least ⅛-inch thick, and metal wall plugs or approved incombustible nail holding devices attached to the wall surface shall be used for nailing. See Plate V. at Borough Engineer's Office.

4. The walls of fireplaces shall never be less than 8 inches thick, and if built of stone the minimum thickness shall be 12 inches.

5. All fireplaces and chimney breasts shall have trimmer arches or other approved fire-resistive contruction supporting hearths. The arches and hearths shall be at least 20 inches wide measured from the face of the chimney breast. The arches shall be of brick, stone or hollow tile, not less than 4 inches thick. A flat stone or a reinforced concrete slab may be used to carry the hearth instead of an arch if it be properly supported and a suitable fill be provided between it and the hearth. The length of trimmer arches and hearths shall be not less than 24 inches longer than the fireplace opening. Hearths shall be of brick, stone, tile, or concrete as may be specified. Wood centering under a trimmer arch shall be removed before plastering the ceilings beneath.

6. No coal burning heater shall be placed in a fireplace which does not conform to the foregoing requirements and have an incombustible mantel.

7. No wooden mantel or other woodwork shall be placed within 8 inches of the side or within 12 inches of the top of any open fireplace. No combustible summer piece or fire board shall be used.

8. Any and all persons who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance or fail to comply therewith, or who shall violate or fail to comply with any order or regulation made thereunder, or who shall build in violation of any detailed statement of specifications or plans submitted and approved thereunder, or any certificate or permit issued thereunder, shall severally for each and every such violation and non-compliance respectively, forfeit and pay a penalty in the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) for the use of said borough, to be recovered as debts of like character are now recoverable by law. The imposition of one penalty for any violation of this ordinance shall not excuse the violation, or permit it to continue; and all such persons shall be required to correct or remedy such violations or defects within a reasonable time; and when not otherwise specified, each ten days that prohibited conditions are maintained shall constitute a separate offense.

9. All ordinances or parts of ordinances in conflict with this Ordinance are hereby repealed.

ENACTED into an Ordinance of The Borough of Bristol, at the Council Chamber, this fourteenth day of February, A. D. 1927.

JOSEPH de B. ABBOTT,

ATTEST:

HENRY H. H. POOLE,
Secretary of Council.

APPROVED this 24th day of February, A. D. 1927.

CLIFFORD L. ANDERSON,
Burgess.
